

nuTsie Launches Two New Music Game Apps for iPhone

Top iPhone App Developer Mines Great Guitar Riffs and Kids' Classics

SEATTLE (May 14, 2009) – Melodeo, purveyor of the nuTsie line of digital music products, announced today immediate availability of two new iPhone games, Name That Guitar Riff and Kids Song Kwiz Game. iPhone and iPod Touch users can download the apps from their iPhone or iPod Touch or from the iTunes Store on their PC or Mac.

Name That Guitar Riff is offered for free in a Lite version and at $.99 for the full version. The game features some of the greatest rock guitar riffs of all time along with trivia questions about the songs, albums and artists associated with the riffs. Players can score points at Groupie, Roadie and Rock Star levels.

Kids Song Kwiz Game is a “name that tune” game featuring 100 all-time favorite children’s songs, offered at $.99. Players listen to a song snippet and try to match the song to a cartoon image depicting the song title while a timer counts down.

“We’re all about providing opportunities for people to enrich their lives by enjoying more music in more places,” said Melodeo VP of Business Development Dave Dederer. “Integrating great music into an engaging gaming experience is a fun way for us to expand our vision.”

Melodeo is a leader in streaming media, serving millions of visitors a month at nuTsie.com and hundreds of thousands of customers with its smartphone music apps.
