

nuTsie Brings iTunes Music to Windows Mobile with Handango nuTsie Music Service Provides Access to iTunes Music and More on Windows Mobile Smartphones

SEATTLE (October 8, 2008) – nuTsie, a leader in mobile and online music, announced service today on more than two dozen Smartphone models powered by Windows Mobile software, including the popular Samsung BlackJack, Palm Treo and Motorola Q. The nuTsie application for Windows Mobile is available immediately through leading software purveyor Handango.

nuTsie allows anyone to listen to their iTunes music in hi-fi quality on their Windows Mobile Smartphone, Web-connected computer or other mobile phone. nuTsie users can also build customized playlists from hundreds of thousands of songs, receive recommended music based on their playlists, and share and explore playlists from users in the nuTsie community.

“nuTsie has already been a huge success on other phones, and we’re excited to bring this service to millions of Windows Mobile users through Handango,” said Dave Dederer, Vice President of Business Development at Melodeo and founding member of the GRAMMY-nominated, multi-platinum rock band The Presidents of the United States of America.

nuTsie offers Windows Mobile Smartphone owners an easy, inexpensive way to access their iTunes libraries on the go and to hear other new music from the nuTsie community. nuTsie also offers a superior music recommendation engine and custom playlist building.

nuTsie for Windows Mobile is available immediately on Handango for a one-time fee of $19.95, covering all-you-can-eat music for the life of the device, or for a monthly subscription of $4.99.
